DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

Claims 1-19 are rejected as failing to define the invention in the manner required by 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph.

The claims are narrative in form and replete with indefinite and functional or operational language. The structure which goes to make up the device must be clearly and positively specified. The structure must be organized and correlated in such a manner as to present a complete operative device. The claims must be in one sentence form only. Note the format of the claims in the patents cited by the Examiner.

The statutory class of the invention is not identified, due to the claiming of a unit, device, program, hardware, software and means. Many features with the intended goal of navigation, transporting, controlling, analyses, entertaining, testing, simulating, educating have not established as to how such a purpose is achievable using the units, system or systems of devices, programs, or hardware interconnected mechanically, electrically, by software, hardware, wireless. In other words there appears to be no guidance to the skilled artisan as to how to make or even use the claimed invention. Many statements are not defined such as "state-of-the-art" or "all-in-one" which are not defined. Taking into consideration all of the above stated items as examples it is not clear to the Examiner what specifically the applicant is trying to encompass.

It is also noticed that the claims appear to encompass more than one invention, which may lead to a restriction requirement (See MPEP 800). However, the claims are so incomprehensible that they preclude a determination of the scope of the inventions and also make it impossible to group the individual claims into separate distinct inventions.
